Wildcats: World's End

It's the End of the World As They Know It

For almost six months, the WildStorm Universe has been rocked by one major tribulation after another. First came Armageddon... then Revelations... then Number of the Beast. So where do things go from there?

Well, the situation could spiral towards a World's End...

"After the conclusion of Number of the Beast [a currently-running six-part biweekly story arc], the status quo of the WildStorm Universe will be drastically changed," editor Ben Abernathy told Comic Shop Newsarama's Chris Arrant, "and I guess World's End is a pretty good hint as to what the nature of it will be!"

This new status quo isn't just another miniseries event, either. The books that launch the revamped WildStorm Universe "are new on-going books, not simply mini-series," Abernathy said. "And they will be new-reader friendly, so despite the build-up with other titles, it won't be necessary to have read those books to understand what's happening in the World's End material!"

The first book to spin out of Number of the Beast will be Wildcats: World's End, a new ongoing series by Christos Gage, Neil Googe, & Trevor Hairsine. According to Abernathy, the new series will star "Grifter, Zealot, Spartan, Maul, Warblade, Ladytron, and Voodoo from the first volume of Wildcats... and then a pair of our heroines from WildStorm Revelations: Nemesis and Backlash! It's almost a Kheran family reunion! And the wholly new vision has a lot to do with what the world's become and their new roles in it following Number of the Beast."

Writer Christos Gage is reluctant to reveal too many details about the new series or the status quo that it presents. "I don't want to spoil the currently running Number Of The Beast series, by Scott Beatty & Chris Sprouse, so I can't spill everything. I will say that the premise is something I don't believe has ever been done in an ongoing superhero book before. Fans of every era of the Wildcats, from the early Image period to Alan Moore's run to Joe Casey's Wildcats 3.0, will find nods to those classic issues.

"But our goal, while respecting the past, is to blaze new trails, so those who have never read a Wildcats comic before have a perfect opportunity to get in on the ground floor of something really exciting."

So what is the "unique new vision for the Wildcats" promised in the series' solicitation info? "Well, judging from the cover art, Los Angeles isn't in very good shape at all," Gage said. "Something earth-shattering has happened. The Wildcats have to deal with a radical new status quo in the WildStorm Universe. Is it something they can undo? Or are they just picking up the pieces and helping the survivors as best they can? At the core of the book is this question: What does a team of world-savers do when they've failed to save the world?"

By assembling a cast of characters that includes members from earlier periods of Wildcats history, Gage is not only drawing from, but also acknowledging the importance of these eras in WildStorm history. "The prior Wildcats series are still in continuity... Warblade is there, along with Maul, Zealot, Grifter, Voodoo, and a version of Spartan who looks similar to his old-school self. But there are new faces as well, including Nemesis and the new Backlash...and of course Maxine Manchester, aka Ladytron, [one of Alan Moore's contributions to Wildcats history] is making her triumphant and psychotic return!"

Wildcats: World's End is illustrated by Neil Googe, who built a reputation for himself with his work on Welcome to Tranquility. Gage describes Googe's work on this new series as "fantastic. I was a huge fan of what Neil did on Welcome To Tranquility, which is one of my favorite new books of recent years...but I think he's stepped up his game even more with Wildcats! His style has become edgier and more detailed. Check out his cover to #1--that's what you can expect. His art is incredibly intricate, powerful, and tells the story perfectly. And his designs for the characters are right on target. Maxine, Maul--really, all of them--look perfect, truly embodiments of who they are as characters. It's terrific stuff."

In addition, each issue will feature a backup story written by Gage and illustrated by Trevor Hairsine. "The backup is about John Lynch--the original John Lynch from Team Seven," Gage said. "It concerns his renewed struggle with an arch-enemy...one of the preeminent villains in the WildStorm Universe. Hairsine' art on this one is a real treat."

Gage wants to assure readers that they don't have to be well versed in WildStorm or Wildcats history to enjoy the new series. "This is a new beginning, and new readers will be able to pick up Wildcats #1 and get all the information they need to enjoy the story on its own merits. Having said that, Wildcats: Armageddon especially has an effect on the new ongoing, so interested parties may want to check out the just-released WildStorm: Armageddon TPB!"

Coming up later this summer is a new Authority series. "Of all the books, I think their current state will shock people the most," Abernathy said. "Writers Dan Abnett & Andy Lanning—who should be familiar to WildStorm fans from their acclaimed Majestic run—have brought so many different and cool ideas to the property, that they're literally redefining it with each page they write! And joining them on art duties is the incredible Simon Coleby, who lent pen-and-ink to last years Midnighter: Armageddon, and is definitely on the fast-track to becoming an 'elite' level artist. I can say honestly, based on the four issues of script and art that are already in-the-can, people will not be disappointed!"

So what else is in the works for the new WildStorm? "Fans of the critically-acclaimed StormWatch: Post Human Division. will be glad to know that August is the return of the series—starting with issue #13!" Abernathy said (The first twelve issues are currently available in trade paperback!). "Writer Ian Edginton, who worked on The Establishment for us a few years back and landed an Eisner nod for last year's Scarlet Traces, brings a gritty eye to the rag-tag team; like Wildcats, they have a completely different cast. Joining him on art is the fantastic team of Leandro Fernandez & Francisco Paronzini, who also worked on last year's Armageddon series... I can judge from the first four finished issues that Ian, Leo, and Francisco mean real business with this new direction. It's not for the faint of heart!"

The last major linchpin of the new WildStorm Universe will be the revamped Gen13. "There is a new creative team debuting on Gen13 #21, following a planned two-month hiatus," Abernathy said, "and I couldn't be more excited to announce it as: word wizard Scott Beatty and pencil/ink warlord Mike Huddleston! Picking up where issue twenty leaves off, and reflecting the new status quo of World's End, this talented pair will be taking the book in a direction that none could have imagined!"

Gage envisions the new Wildcats book as one facet of a revamped and re-energized Wildstorm Universe—a revamp that he describes as "very exciting. The creative teams of the books are bold and top-notch, perfectly suited to their titles. We're taking an approach that, as I said, I can't recall seeing in a superhero universe before, and I'm thrilled to be a part of it.

"Also, I just want to say that Ben is determined that these books will come out on time. Most of them have multiple issues already in the can--and they don't ship until summer! I've read them, and it's excellent stuff. I know many readers were disappointed with the delays of Wildcats and Authority last time around, but I hope they'll give these books a shot...they'll be on time, and they'll be good. Pick up the first issues and see for yourself!"

Wildcats: World's End #1, a $2.99 comic with two Neil Googe covers that ship in a 50/50 ratio and join together to form a single image, is scheduled for July 30th release.
